EX-SPEAKER COLFAX furnished the following reminiscence of the late Fernando Wood: Between himself and Mr. Wood there existed pleasant personal relations, although the latter had placed himself on the farthest plank of opposition to the war and war legislation. One day in debate, while denouncing a proposed measure of reconstruction, Mr. Wood said: "This would justly be regarded as one of the most infamous acts of this most infamous Congress." He paused at these words, evidently expecting what immediately followed. Hon. Robert Schenck demanded that the words be taken down, and introduced a resolution that Mr. Wood be censured at the bar of the House for his remarks. The expression was evidently a studied one, and Mr. Wood awaited the result with the spirit and air of an expectant martyr. He hoped to make political capital in his district by wearing the decoration of a vigorous personal censure from the Speaker of the Republican Congress. A few days before Mr. Colfax had been reading an English parliamentary work, in which there was a speech of a Speaker of the House of Commons in censure of a member for using words derogatory of Parliament. While the yeas and nays were being taken on the resolution Mr. Colfax thought of this speech, and sending his secretary to the library, he had the volume in his hands by the time Mr. Wood had presented himself at the bar. Much to Mr. Wood's surprise, instead of the political lecture he had anticipated, Mr. Colfax read this British speech, which was to the effect that, "While much could be pardoned for the heat of political debate and party difference, there was no excuse or extenuation for a person who deliberately smirched the character and impugned the House of the body of which he himself was a member." Mr. Colfax added to the English Speaker's address the expression that "no words of mine can add to the justness and severity of this censure," and dismissed Mr. Wood to his seat. Returning to his place on the floor, the New York member said: "Mr. Speaker, may I proceed?" and, leave being given, he continued his speech, beginning, "As I was saying," but was careful not to repeat the objectionable phrase.

NAMES and occupations reported to London census enumerators: "'Wm. Wackwinkle, aged 99, cobblers' wax merchant;' 'Simon Slitwizen, bug destroyer and pork-sausage maker;' 'Wm. Barlow, hoof padder, Herts,' with, under the head of afflictions, 'food and mouth disease, namely, nothing to eat and jolly bad boots.' Some boldly inscribed themselves cadger and beggar and 'mugsman' the last-mentioned worthy putting himself down as 'out of luck' instead of out of work. And yet one more, more independent than all the rest, set himself down thief—'Joe ——, aged 24, thief, plenty of work, Portland.'"

A MAN'S curiosity never reaches the female standard until some one tells him that his name was in yesterday's paper.

Traveling in Old Times.

A careful inspection of the vehicle of former times leads us to the conclusion that our forefathers were lined with zinc and copper-fastened, for nothing short of it could have withstood the joltings and jarrings, the bouncings and bumpings entailed upon those who used any other method of locomotion except that which nature provides. The chariot in which Gen. and Mrs. Washington went to Philadelphia upon his election to the Presidency was no doubt an instrument of torture. To the discomforts of this rambling old carriage may be added, for the General, the incessant wagging of Mrs. Washington's tongue, for it is a well-known fact that Martha was of a shrewish nature, and made no bones of giving the General her views in a very forcible manner. The method of traveling which they pursued gave publicity to the fact that the General had a certain lecture every night for a night-cap. In the course of their journey, they arranged to spend the nights at the houses of the gentry scattered along between Mount Vernon and Philadelphia, and Martha was often heard to nag her lord and master until a loud snore announced that the General was safe in the land of dreams from all worldly annoyances.

The chariot was the acknowledged mark of aristocracy. A journey in these days entailed a retinue, somewhat after the following order:

1. Marster and Missis in a carriage.
2. Marster's "boy" on horseback, with a led horse for Marster to ride when he wished to stretch his legs.
3. A wagon containing two hair trunks and Missis' maid.

The rate of progression was about four miles an hour.

The habit of carrying servants even on neighborly visits obtained in Virginia and Maryland until the abolition of slavery. A form of entertaining called "spending the day" was the fashion. This consisted in going to a friend's house early in the morning, and staying until late in the evening, consuming the interval in a succession of meals. Beside the visitors, the coachman and horses, there was usually a "maid," who sat on the rack behind the carriage, swinging her legs in ecstatic delight at the prospect of "going abroad."

Chaises were the only two seated vehicles in use, and were something like a modern top buggy, except that they had but two wheels. Consequently, going up hill, the occupants were being shaken out behind, and going down hill they were spilled out before.—Louisville Post.

A Breach-of-Promise Case.

Lawyers are sometimes put to their wits' end to discover a plausible defense in a breach of promise case. In such a plight an Indiana lawyer once found himself. His client was a little hump-backed fellow, as unattractive in manners as in person. "Who would marry such a man?" thought the lawyer, "and how could she sue him for refusing?" That thought suggested his defense, as the woman, a rosy-cheeked, raven-haired and handsome girl, walked into court.

The marriage contract was proved, and also that the wedding-day had been set. One white muslin and two red calico dresses had been bought by the intended bride. The mother testified to the wedding feast of one turkey, six chickens, one ham, and a mess of beans, potatoes, turnips and cabbage. There was also a big custard pie.

"I made it myself," swore the old lady, "and though I say it myself, as shouldn't say it, there wasn't any other woman in the neighborhood as could make one like it." Upon these facts the lawyers for the young woman asked $5,000 damages.

The man's lawyer made only two points in defense. First, that the lady had sustained no damage, as she could marry a much better-looking man than his client. Second, that the dresses would be needed in other courtships, which would undoubtedly soon take place, and that the supper was eaten by herself and friends, and not by his client.

The jury, however, gave her a verdict of $8 for the dresses and $3.50 for the supper.

From the Pyramids.

The view is immense. At our feet lie the countless tombs of Egyptian Kings, whose names have passed into oblivion, and whose very bones were stolen thousands of years ago. The Sphinx seems but a common rock, though it rears its head sixty feet toward us from near the pyramid's base. Off yonder are the pyramids of Sak Karah, the necropolis of ancient Memphis. Beyond them all to the west of us is the desert, sweeping away for trackless leagues. To the east is the Nile, with its valley, like a variegated ribbon, disappearing toward the south as it winds behind the sand-covered hills. And there Cairo rises like "a dream in stone," its citadel picturing before us the drama of Saracen conquest and cruelty for 1,000 years.—Christian Union.

A MAN is like a chameleon, which takes the color of the tree on which he lives. No one can live with the wise without learning something, and no one can live in a thief's house without thinking theft a very indifferent sort of a sin. The Dutch says: "He that lives with cripples soon learns to limp."

IT is queer that America has not yet been able to produce a grape which will make raisins, though there is something like it in California.

SINCE 1866 9,000 divorces have been granted in Italy, Milan being set down for no less than 3,000. Since 1870 Rome has had 600.

A CINCINNATI woman recently knocked down her husband with a brick, and when the policeman came running up she was looking around for the brick to kiss it.

Grocery-Store Talk.

The articles in a grocery store got mad and had a little talk over politics, religion, etc., in a most spirited manner.

"I'm no sucker," said the mackerel.

"You are a mighty scaly sort of party, though," said the sugar, "and I've got sand enough to tell you so to your face."

"I'll run counter to that," remarked a piece of woodwork lengthwise of the store.

"Lay the question on the shelf," said another portion.

"Let us have peas," cried out the coffee.

"Bah! you must be green," said the starch; "look at me and get a little stiffening to brace you."

"Lord help us," wailed the butter.

"Shell out and let's get from beneath his yolk," cackled the eggs.

"Hit him with a London club," said a bottle on the top shelf.

"None of your sauce, wait till you catchup with the times," fired up the pepper, in hot temper.

"Shut up, or I'll sour on the whole of you," snapped the vinegar.

"Taffy, taffy," whispered the molasses, "let's get into the thick of it."

"Let's call it a draw," simpered the tea.

"We are too strong," howled the cheese.

"How have the mitey fallen!" replied the knife as it slung the cheese out to the door.

"Aw, you shut up," answered the cheese as it closed the blade and knocked it out of sight behind a barrel.

"Let's soap for better things," said the lye.

"How can we in the presence of a rye?" said the soda.

"Well, if I'm a lye you are an alkali," came the answer.

"I rise to a point of order," sang out the yeast.

"Sit him down," squealed out a ham "for I'm about smoked out."

"You can all be bought," said the candy.

"Ah, you sweet thing," came back the response, "what are you giving us?"

"Well, I'll be damned," ripped out the coffee sack, "if you're not a scamp."

Methods in German Schools.

No time was lost even in the gloom of this dark winter morning, for the girls had scarcely removed their wraps and settled themselves in their seats when the school-mistress, pointing to a little girl in front of her, asked:

"How old art thou, Gretchen?"

"Six years and one month," was the answer.

"How old art thou, Marie?"

"Six years and seven months," said Marie.

"Who tells me this, my little maids! How much older is Marie than Gretchen?"

"Fraulein! Fraulein! Fraulein!" went up in an eager shout from every part of the room—so eager were they all to give an answer. The answer came, and she continued:

"How many little girls are sitting on the bench, Madelien Louise?"

"Four," replied Maiden Louise, looking carefully along the line.

"Will Madchen Helene be kind enough to count them?" which Helene did, and gave five as a result.

"Now, how does it happen that Madchen Louise had only four?"

The whole school paused a moment, until suddenly it dawned upon them all, and, bursting into a hearty laugh (which rightly enough did not horrify this sensible teacher), they cried:

"Why, Fraulein! Louise forgot to count herself!"

So Maiden Louise was corrected, and in this simple manner, passing from one subject to another, counting desks, scholars and window-panes, adding, subtracting, and employing only objects before their eyes, or rows of little wooden balls strung upon parallel wires, they learned the two great principles of increase and decrease without so much as touching a text-book in the first whole year of their schooling.—*Cor. THE FLEA.

This insect belongs to the genus Pulex. When he gets on your arm you Pulex-citedly at your sleeve. You are anxious also for the insect's leave. The flea has a strong love for man, but he manages to get over his attachment. He is a leper. In olden times they used to drive the leper out of the synagogue. When the flea gets on you, he sees sin agog in your heart. The flea is a parasite. You have not to cross the ocean, therefore, to see a Paris sight. Fleas are very plentiful. You remember that Mary had a little lamb whose fleas were white as snow. In ancient times, however, the golden fleas were very scarce, and consequently much sought after. There can be no doubt about the habitat of this social insect, for does not the Bible speak of it [illegible] from the wrath to [illegible] And still it is referred to in the [illegible] when "no man pursueth." But we prefer not to dwell on this subject. (Neither do we wish to have this subject dwell on us. We might, ere long, have a flea in our ear should we not stop.—Boston Transcript.

THE DECORATION OF A ROOM.

Crude white is in favor with house-wives for ceilings—"it looks so clean." That is just its fault. It looks so clean, even when it is not, that it makes all else look dirty, even though it may be clean. To paint the flat ceiling of a moderately-sized room by hand is simply a waste of labor. It is only at great personal inconvenience that one can look long at it, while as a matter of fact no one cares to do so. You see it occasionally, by accident, and for a moment, and, that that casual glimpse should not be a shock to the eye, it is well to tint it in accordance with the room, or even cover it with a diapered paper, which will to some extent withdraw the attention from the cracks that frequently disfigure the ceilings of modern houses. What hand-painting we can afford may best be reserved for the panels or doors, window-shutters and the like, where it can be seen—these doors and the other wood-work being painted in two or three shades of colors, flat or varnished, according as we prefer softness of tone or durability of surface. Perhaps it will be best in this instance that the wood-work should fall in with the tone of the dado; but this is not a point on which any rule can be laid down. The decoration of the panels should be in keeping with the wall-paper patterns. It may be much more pronounced than they, but still it must not assert itself. One great point in consideration in the decoration of a room is the relation of the various patterns to one another. It may even be as well to sacrifice an otherwise admirable design simply because you can find nothing else to do with it. A single pattern, once chosen, will often control the whole scheme of decoration.—Magazine of Art.

RICE AS FOOD.

[illegible] as food is set forth [illegible] diet of the people in [illegible] all Eastern [illegible] is used as a [illegible] present low price of domestic rice, it is the most [illegible] cheap. To steep [illegible] about eighty per cent. of water, and do not gain much in the process of cooking. Rice has no waste whatever, containing only twenty-two per cent. of water, and in boiling gains three times its original bulk. Hence, one pound of rice at six and one-fourth cents per pound makes three times as much when cooked; equal to three pounds of potatoes at two and one-half cents per pound, or seven and one-half cents.

Rice properly prepared should come upon the table dry, each grain unbroken, and served with the condiments used on potatoes; and be partaken of as a vegetable, with meats, and not as a dessert.

STEP ON THE OTHER MAN.

One night a burly Englishman, who had the faculty of exciting Carlyle to frenzy by talking about O'Connell, called on him, and, after a little talk about the weather, at it they went. It was hot and heavy and a fierce and merciless contest. Tea put a brief stop to it, but it soon begun again. There were several guests present and Mrs. Carlyle put her foot on the Englishman's, imploring peace. He no sooner felt the pressure than he screamed out: "Why don't you touch your husband's toe, Mrs. Carlyle? I am sure he is far more to blame than I am." The whole company burst out laughing, including Carlyle himself, and tea was finished in comparative tranquility.

STARTING IN THE WORLD.

Many an unwise parent labors hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving enough to give his children a start in this world, as it is called. Setting a young man afloat with money left by his relatives is like tying bladders under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him how to swim and he will never need bladders. Give your child a sound education and you have done enough for him. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to laws which govern man, and you have given him what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies.

"IT was their first night aboard the steamer. "At last," he said tenderly, "we are all alone, out upon the deep waters of the dark blue sea, and your heart will always beat for me as it has beat in the past?" "My heart's all right," she answered, languidly; "but my stomach feels awful."

MISS AMELIA LEWIS asserts in Food and Health that nearly $15,000,000 is [illegible] to the marine factories, and that they have added nearly $4 to the value of every oyster killed.

VINES are said to extract yearly from the soil about three-fourths of the quantity of potash and phosphoric acid that the cereals take up.

The Influence of Poe.

Poe, like Pope, threw himself into a war with dunces. He hit and thrust at them vigorously; he exposed a score of cheap popularities; he was merciless to the inexpensive reputations then readily acquired by every tootler on the whistle of Miss Eliza Cook. Since the time of Poe American literature has wonderfully advanced in the acquisition of force and polish. American novelists, for example, almost give us lessons in careful elaboration of style, in reticence and in well-calculated effects. American poets are, perhaps, too numerous. That they get a hearing as they do, and appeal to a really-large public, says much for the interest of the people in contemporary verse. In form, in the mere art of versifying, even the minor American poets of to-day show wonderful versatility and deftness. Commonplace is much less successful than it was of old. Imitation analysis is almost too careful. We cannot but think that this rapid ripening of the American muse (who was a raw, uninformed school-girl in the life-time of Poe) is due in part to the influence of that critic. His method is as unlike the method of Mr. Matthew Arnold as possible. But he exercised the same kind of influence. Like Mr. Arnold, he introduced some tinge of French thought and of French literature into the workmanship of his countrymen. Perhaps he was not a wide reader, and the element of affectation in his nature may be detected in his quotations of obscure Latin authors and in his Oriental allusions. It is hard to say how much knowledge was implied by these allusions—how rich the mine was from which Poe dug these sparkling fragments. Still, he judged the writers of his country with some knowledge of other literatures. As he was quite ruthless in his criticisms he did good, but at his own cost.—London News.

Capturing an Englishman.

"Once I was filling an engagement at a London theater," said J. K. Emmet, the actor; "a gentleman with buttoned kids and hair parted in the middle occupied a private box. He coolly surveyed me through his eyeglass. I was feeling pretty good, and was acting with more than usual freedom. The audience roared with laughter, but not a muscle of his face moved. He stared at me like a Gorgon. I was nettled, and I determined to capture him. I did my best, but there he sat partially turned toward me in the easiest of positions with the coldest of faces. You could fairly read on his features: 'Well, upon my soul, I expected something pretty bad from you Yanks, but this is perfectly execrable.' I kept my guard, and made no secret of my effort to capture him. The audience dropped on it, and became deeply interested. I warbled 'Wilhelmine Strauss,' and filled it to the brim with grotesqueness, but the fellow sat there like a stone statue entirely unmoved. Apparently nothing would fetch him. And so the performance progressed, the audience watching the man in the box more than it did me. At last I made an impression. It was in the act where I pranced around the stage with a little child astraddle my shoulders. A faint smile overspread the man's face. He raised his gloved hands and languidly clapped them twice. The audience screamed with delight, and from that time until the close of the performance I had every soul in the house with me. The naivete of the child, combined with the acting, had been too much for him, and I had brought him down."

A Vision of Washington.

In his reminiscences, the Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts, relates the following: "The scene of my father's only ghost story—if so it may be called—was laid at Mount Vernon, and this alone was sufficient to make the occasion memorable to a boy. The chamber in which his uncle had died was assigned by Judge Washington to his guest; the host, as he withdrew, mentioned the rumor that an interview with Washington had been granted to some of its former occupants. If this were true, my father pondered upon the possibility that he might be found worthy to behold the glorified spirit of him who was so revered by his countrymen. And during the night he did see Washington, and this is all I have to say about it. If I gave the particulars I should feel bound to give a full explanation of them by Dr. Hammond, or some other expert in cerebral illusions; and this would occupy too much space for an episode. It may be worth while to say that nothing my father saw, or thought he saw, was useful in confirming his faith in a spiritual world. His assurance in this matter was perfect. He believed that brain action (if that is the correct expression) was at times set up in us by friends no longer in the flesh, and that his own life had been guided by these mysterious influences."

BREAD MUFFINS.—Take four or five slices of bakers' bread, cut off the crusts, put into a pan and pour over hot water, only just sufficient to soak the slices. Let stand an hour, drain off any liquor that you can, beat the mass smooth, mix in half a pint of sweet milk, two table-spoonfuls of sifted flour, a table-spoonful of melted butter, a little salt and three well-beaten eggs. Have muffin-rings, as well as baking-pan, hot and buttered, and fill each two-thirds full. Bake brown in a quick oven. Eaten hot.

HORSERADISH SAUCE.—Grate a quantity of horseradish, boil it in sufficient water to give it the consistency of sauce, add a pinch of salt and two or three table-spoonfuls of tarragon vinegar, then stir in off the fire a gill of cream beaten up with the yelk of an egg.

"ONE touch of nature"—George has promised his Ethel the first shot, for luck. A covey rises. Ethel (at the critical moment)—"Oh, George! Perhaps they, too, have loved."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

DECEASED.—Henry Rickey, of Antelope Valley, died from appoplexy, at Bishop Creek, Inyo county, on the 15th inst. Mr. Rickey was a native of Ohio, aged 51 years

Constable S. G. Stebbins, of Bodie, died on Monday last. The deceased was a pioneer, a native of New York, aged 55 years.

Joseph N. Harrison, formerly of Bodie, committed suicide, at San Francisco, on the 12th inst. Mr. Harrison was a member of the California Pioneer Associations of San Francisco and Bodie, a native of Canada, aged 65 years. The death of our late friend Harrison is worthy of more than a passing notice. The deceased emigrated to New York city at an early age where he remained until 1849, when he came "The Horn Around" to California. Opening a store on the corner of California and Keatny streets, San Francisco, his business was a success, the results of which were invested in city lots—one parcel being the block bounded Stockton, Sutter, Powell and Post streets. Of a restless disposition he went traveling, circumnavigated the world, and visited islands of the Pacific. Returning he successively located at Sacramento, Pioche, White Pine, Tahita, Bodie, Mammoth and last again at Bodie. Last Summer he went to China, Japan, Arizona and New Mexico. Returning to Bodie he remained a few days and then departed for Oregon, Washington Territory and Sandwich Islands. He returned from the Islands about three weeks before his death. He was a prominent member of the Pacific Coast Pioneers of Bodie. Poverty was the cause of his suicide. His many friends deeply regret his death, and its sad surroundings.

PIONEER BANQUET.—The members of the Pacific Coast Pioneers of Bodie, residing at Bridgeport, will have a Reunion on Saturday evening, December 31st. A limited number of admission cards to the Festival will be issued. The members are Jesse N. Summers, George N. Whitman, John C. Murphy, David Hays, William A. Thayer, F. Richardson, A. F. Bryant, A. C. Folger, John A. McQuaid and R. M. Folger.

PUBLIC READING.—Mrs. Abbie S. Lovett gave Public Readings on Thursday evening, which were well-rendered to a numerous attendance of an appreciating audience. The entertainment closed with a dance at the Allen House.

ROAD DISTRICTS.—Antelope, Bridgeport, Bodie, Benton and Lundy constitute the new road districts. Upon petition appointments of Overseers will be made by the Board of Supervisors.

APPOINTED.—The Board of Supervisors appointed George W. Sproule Constable of Bodie Township, vice S. G. Stebbins, deceased; and Charles Anton for Bridgeport.

CHARITY.—The ladies of Bridgeport will give an entertainment, within the next two weeks, for a deserving purpose. It will meet a generous response.

SWEETWATER.—The Patterson Mining District is the attractive point and is likely to overshadow all other districts in Mono county.

ADMITTED.—J. C. Bray, of Bridgeport, has been admitted by Judge Wiggin to practice in the Superior Court.

JUSTICE.—George N. Whitman has been appointed Justice of the Peace for Bridgeport Township, vice R. R. Wilds, resigned.

A. B. Stewart, Druggist, Bodie, has drugs, medicines, paints, oils, ammunition and cartridges.

WILL MEET.—The Board of Supervisors, pursuant to adjournment will meet on next Monday week, Dec. 5.

RESIGNED.—Road Overseer A. J. Severe has resigned. Mr. Severe discharged the duties of the office faithfully and effectively

OBSERVED.—The Sunday Law was observed in town last Sunday.

GOOD ORDER.—The toll roads in this county are in fine order—never better.

THE WEATHER.—This week has been about 20 degrees milder than last week.

James H. Vinson, the veteran California actor, died in New York on Tuesday.

The man in a restaurant who makes the most show and noise, buys the least.

Red Bluff is to have a woolen mill.

VISITOR.—"How long has your master been away?" Irish footman—"Well, sor, ev he'd cum home yisterday, he'd a bin gon a weake tu-morrer; but ev he dudn't return the day afther, shure, he'll a bin away a fortnight nixt Thursday!"—Punch.

NOTHING can exceed the fatuous affection which a girl hails out to her father for a day or, two before the time when she's going to ask for a new dress.

WASTE OF FUEL.

In domestic economy the waste of fuel is exceedingly great, but it is not easy to give precise figures representing the loss of effect, owing to the manifold purposes to be accomplished, including cooking and the heating and ventilation of apartments. If ventilation could be neglected, close stoves, such as are used in Russia, would unquestionably furnish the most economical mode of heating our apartments; but health and comfort are, after all, of greater importance than economy, and these are best secured by means of an open chimney. Not only does an open chimney give rise to an active circulation of air through the room, which is a necessity of our well being, but heat is supplied to the room by radiation from the incandescent material instead of conduction from stove surfaces. In the one case the walls and furniture of the room absorb the luminous heat rays and yield them back to the transparent air, whereas, in the latter case, the air is the first recipient of the stove heat, and the walls of the room remain comparatively cool and damp, giving rise to an unpleasant musty atmosphere and to dry rot or other mouldy growth. The adversaries of the open fire place say that it warms you on only one side, but this one-sided radiant heat produces upon the extremities of this somewhat humid country and indeed upon all unprejudiced people, a particularly agreeable sensation, which is proof, I think, of its healthful influence. The hot, radiant fire-brick stove, indeed, the sun in its effect on man and matter, and before discarding it on the score of wastefulness and smokiness we should try hard, I think, to get rid of its admitted imperfections. If incandescent coke is the main source of radiant heat, why, it may be asked, do we not resort at once to coke for domestic fuel? The reasons are two-fold: the coke would be most difficult to light, and when lighted would look cheerless without the lively flickering flame. The true solution consists, I venture to say, in the combination of solid and gaseous fuel when brought thoroughly under control, by first separating these two constituents of coal. I am bold enough to go so far as to say that raw coal should not be used as fuel for any purpose whatsoever, and that the first step toward the judicious and economic production of heat is the gas retort, or gas producer, in which coal is converted either entirely into gas, or into gas and coke, as is the case in our ordinary gas works.—Siemens, in Nature.

CIRCULATION OF MATTER.

Notwithstanding the constant return of plant and animal to the parent earth, all the mineral matter they contain does not remain where they are deposited. Rains and rivers daily remove from the soil a portion of the materials which are so essential to the perpetuation of animal and vegetable forms, and transport them to the sea. Thus the natural store of mineral food becomes daily smaller, and the land in consequence less fitted for the growth of plants. But for this contingency also there is a provision. The solid rocks which form the crust of the earth contain all these essential forms of inorganic matter in minute proportion. As these rocks crumble and mingle with the soil they yield constant small supplies of each ingredient—of phospho. acid, lime, magnesia, etc., etc. These springs, which trickle through the rocks from above or from beneath, dissolve and diffuse wherever they go. Thus in many localities, a moderate supply is day by day brought to the surface to replace that which, by natural causes, is constantly removed. And the great seas help in this work of restoration. They heave their lofty waves into the air, and break in foam, that the rough wind may take up and bear back again to the land a portion of the salty spoils with which the rivers are ever enriching them. And then, lest these small daily restorations should not succeed in perpetually maintaining the necessary richness of the soil in mineral plant-food, periods of convulsions come at last to their aid. Great physical revolutions from time to time intervene. Now all at once and now by slow degrees, the bottom of the sea becomes dry. Land and water change places, as they have often done during the geological history of the globe; and after each change new races of plants forthwith begin to take up what rivers and rains have carried down into former sea-beds. The same mineral matter begins to play over again the same part as before in the constant succession of animal and vegetable life. In this we see another long cycle, through which certain ingredients of the solid earth are ever slowly moving.

WEBSTER AND THE STAGE-DRIVER.

Daniel Webster, traveling, had the night stage from Baltimore to Washington, with no companion save the driver, and contemplated that worthy's forbidding visage with a very uneasy mind. He had nearly reasoned his suspicious fears away, when they came to the dark woods between Bladensburg and Washington, when Mr. Webster felt the courage oozing out of his finger-ends as he thought what a fitting place it was for a murder. Suddenly the driver turned toward him and roughly demanded his name. It was given. Then he wanted to know where he was going. "To Washington. I am a Senator," said Daniel, expecting his first thoughts were near realization. The driver grasped him by the hand, saying: "How glad I am, mister, to hear that! I've been badly scared for the last hour, for, when I looked at you, I felt sure you was a highwayman."

Ornithological Justice.

A most remarkable instance of a sparrow perpetrating a shameful theft, and its punishment, has been recorded by Father Bougeant—the advocate for the existence of language among animals—as having taken place on the banks of the Leven, in Fifeshire. "A sparrow finding a nest that a martin had just built possessed himself of it. The martin, seeing the usurper in her house, called for help to expel him. A thousand martins came full speed, and attacked the sparrow; but the latter, being covered on every side and presenting only his large beak, at the entrance of the nest, was invulnerable, and made the boldest of them that durst approach him repent of their temerity. After a quarter of an hour's combat all the martins disappeared. The sparrow thought he had got the better, and the spectators judged that the martins had abandoned their undertaking. No, in the least. They immediately returned to the charge; and, each of them having obtained a little of that tempered earth with which they make their nests, they all at once fell upon the sparrow and inclosed him in the nest to perish there, though they could not drive him thence."

A CATS LONG JOURNEY.

A gentleman in this city had presented to him a Maltese cat with four young nursing kittens, by a former friend living fourteen miles out in the country. This cat and her kittens were placed in a close-covered basket, inside of which was a blanket in which they were wrapped, and the whole then covered with a thick rug. The cat and her kittens were kept in a room in their new home, and carefully watched, fed and petted for seven days, she appearing to be wonted and content. On the morning of the seventh day she and her kittens were seen at their new home for the last time, and were missed very soon after. The following day at noon she appeared at her old home with all her kittens. She did not return by the road, the way she came, as she was seen by several persons going through the fields with a kitten in her mouth. Allowing thirty hours to have elapsed between the time she was last seen at her new home and the time she was first seen at her old home she must have traveled a distance of 112 miles, carrying a kitten one-half the same distance.—Bangor letter to Forest and Stream.

WINE.

The mistaken idea is entertained by many Americans that the wine consumed in this country is mainly a spurious article. They imagine that if they were, for example, to purchase a case of champagne, the probability would be that the bottles would be filled with some species of cider charged and clarified to make it resemble champagne. People of this way of thinking usually talk as though all the good wine in Europe was consumed by a limited class of Europeans, and as though the dregs and refections were sent across the Atlantic to be augmented by artificial compounds in this country. As a matter of fact, this opinion is wholly erroneous. The wine market in this city contains just as good wine as can be had anywhere in Europe. The customs dues, as they apply to wines, at the present time are favorable to the importation of high grades of wines, for they are fixed with little regard to value, and hence it is relatively cheaper to buy a high-class than a low-class article. Formerly, when an ad valorem duty was applied, a large amount of cheap, sophisticated wine was sent to this country from Cette, in France; but now this trade can no longer be carried on with advantage to the compounders. Our Government exacts from those who put up American champagne with French labels a payment equal to the amount of duty paid on French champagne, and, though the internal-revenue inspectors may be evaded when this business is done upon a small scale, the amount of this spurious fluid which finds its way into the market must be small. Where it would be chiefly met with would be in those places where gentlemen have no business to go. The champagne houses at Rheims which have the highest reputations look to the American market for some of their best purchasers, and a dweller in this city, gifted with ordinary sense, can buy just as good champagne as any obtainable in Europe. There is possibly no city in the world where a much greater variety of wine can be obtained than can be had in New York. All of the great wine-producers in France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Portugal have agents in this city to whom they make direct shipments. There is no doubt certain classes of wine which do not go much beyond the country in which they are grown, but these can usually be had in New York, by order, if any one cares to pay the prices asked for them. The labels on bottles count for very little—if champagne is accepted—and those who buy wine would do well to purchase it in the cask, and have it bottled. The term "Chateau wine" is a mistaken one, for a large portion of the wine sold in bottles under this designation has no true claim to the distinction. But the title has been so much abused that it has now, in France, fallen into contempt as a method of defining the grade of wine, for the "Chateau wine" of one proprietor may be in every way inferior to a common cru grown in a neighboring vineyard.—New York Times.

HOW CATTLE ARE SHIPPED TO ENGLAND.

Cattle are taken on and under deck in stalls measuring two feet eight inches on vessels sailing from New York, and two feet six inches on those from all other ports of the United States. These stalls are built under the supervision of an insurance inspector. During the summer shippers prefer to ship on deck, as the cattle get more air and come out fresher at the end of the voyage. On deck the steamships carry between 160 and 175 animals, the under deck about 225 head. Drinking-water is condensed by steam process on board for their use, the ocean itself proving a never-failing source of supply. The cattle are generally put on the steamer in the stream, after it has left the dock, an old ferry-boat usually being used for the purpose. The number of cattle to be taken is regulated by the insurance inspector, and cattle exporters must pay the entire freight, according to his report, even if they do not ship the entire number. Sheep and pigs are stowed away in stalls on deck where there is not enough room for the cattle. Sometimes in the early spring, when the sea is liable to disturbances, some of the cattle get overboard, and then a very lively time ensues in getting them out. The cattle are hoisted on board usually and lowered, two at a time, by a winch, into the hold. The allowance of water is from six to ten gallons a day to each bullock. The amount of fodder averages one ton to each animal. The rates of insurance apparently vary. Some shippers give it at 3 per cent. in summer to 10 per cent. in winter. There is more risk to cattle from perils of the sea in the latter season, as a heavy storm may make it necessary to light in the ship by throwing the entire dockload of cattle overboard. The carrying capacity of the vessels, of course, varies, but the average, as given by an old shipper, may be put safely at 200 head at the shipment, taking large and small vessels into account. On some of the large steamers the number has reached 500, and one Boston steamer has carried as many as 841 head. The largest shipment from New York by one steamer was 650 head.—Pittsburgh Stockman.

DR. JOHNSON thought the happiest life was that of a man of business with some literary pursuits for his amusement, and that, in general, no one could be virtuous or happy who was not completely employed.

NEW IDEAS OF SIBERIA.

The popular idea of Siberia is of a cold and barren country, a fit prison for the state criminals of Russia. One would as soon think of emigrating to Alaska or to Greenland, in search of a comfortable home, as to this huge Russian province in Asia. But popular notions need correction, and this one is wide of the truth.

If Siberia had a good government, it would present many temptations to farming emigrants. Its supply of pasture for cattle is inexhaustible, and deserves to rank as one of the best grazing countries in the world. California is beginning to import cattle from Siberia, and at a great profit.

The river valleys contain as fine wheat lands as our Western prairies, and, with fair cultivation, could be made to yield immense crops. As the harvests of Russia are beginning to fail, and it can no longer supply the deficiencies of Western Europe, Siberia may yet become a new granary. The chief obstacles at present are a lethargic population, destitute of all enterprise, and the absence of all facilities for reaching good markets. But the right class of emigrants would soon remedy these difficulties, and Siberia certainly holds great possibilities of growth.

A CLERICAL CONUNDRUM.

"Does yer know de difference between your sermon last Sunday and my big rooster?" asked Uncle Mose of Parson Bledso, of the Galveston Blue Light Colored Tabernacle.

"Between my sermon and your big rooster?" queried Parson Bledso.

"Perzackly."

"Gib it up, Uncle Mose."

"De rooster makes me open my eyes when I is asleep, and your sermon makes me shut my eyes when I is awake."

It took three men to hold Parson Bledso until Old Mose could make his escape. A meeting of the elders of the Blue Light Tabernacle has been called to consider the resignation of the pastor.—Galveston News.
